Where are the players?? I am playing this game on a weekend day time in Asia. I selected asian servers and the number of players are pathetically low.. As many have said, it looks great, but the moment when you enter the hangar is probably the best of the game. I lost interest already during the first mission - it is just too simple and boring. Nice graphics don't make up for this!. Strongly recommended for anyone looking for a beautiful magical adventure and/or a light puzzling experience.

This is a wonderfully charming and polished adventure that can take up to 2 hours depending on the speed in which you move through each segmented area. It's definitely the most magical experience I've felt in VR and may have easily become my Mum's personal favorite even if it was short.

Though given the quality of the experience any time would have been too short.

I really hope that more people find this because a second chapter as teased at the end of this would be incredible.

+ Beautiful, magical and always engaging in a charming way.

- If you're looking for tough puzzles and mind benders without caring about flare, this likely isn't for you as the 'puzzles' were more about the experience than trying to challenge you, but that also made each one easily accessible.. The game's pretty fun and addictive. I'd love to see bigger variety in locations and equipment, but as I understand, the devs are likely no longer working on it. As it stands, it's worth a couple of goes per day.. The game is very close to the legendary TTD!

I very much enjoyed it. But the best part is the game's optimization - I have hundreds of different vehicles around the map and the FPS are really high (while I don't really have a high-end machine).. Makes every Pivot, Flipnote, and Newgrounds animation seem utterly irrelevant.

If my 8-year-old self played this, knowing how much i was into that♥♥♥♥♥ i would have taken up masturbation much earlier.

9.5/10. saint sacrament s't'un osti d'bon jeu

Avoid at all costs. One of the worst FPS experiences I have ever had!

I really hope Kaos Studios does not rip everyone off again with the sequel to this game, Homefront. The thing that strikes me most about this game is the ability to make your own creations and use them to solve puzzles, kill enemies, ect.

Some things to note about this game:

- A well made sequel to Draw a Stickman: EPIC
- It brings out your creativity and puts your drawing skills to the test
- The ability to make creations and share them with your friends as well as use them as tools to solve puzzles or weapons to slay enemies
- Story is pretty meh, but you can sort of create your own if you wish
- Collect pets and other secrets along your journey
- Achievements are fun and easy to get
- You can complete the game in around 2 and a half or 3 hours if you try hard enough, or you can play around for several more hours than that

If you are an artist or have an expansive imagination, you will enjoy this game: also, 5 bucks is not that much.. The game is fine but the audio files only being .mp3 is horrible they should allow .m4a. This is one of those "so bad it's good" cringeworthy, B-level indie games with English subtitles (all spoken dialogue is in Ukrainian, I believe), disgusting models, confusing controls, and a bizarre narrative about the misdeeds done to a talking tomato and his family. And because of that, I love it. Would unironically recommend this to anyone looking for a nonsensical fever dream disguised as a game.. This is cool! Can't wait for multiplayer matches!. They recycled everything from the older Spellforce games. Characters, races, they even recycled maps from Spellforce 2 for the DLC scenarios!
